Quinones talk inspirational never give up on them Chase your own dreams; they are waiting for you River Community College this year. Quinones chose to speak at Pearl because they feel the pride of being Latino. Contributions made by our ancestors, and those who continue to explore the Americas and the Spanish ex plores. The ability to gain insight into the practical applications of Bible knowledge and recognized that the sagas of 1 Corinthians, Paul spoke of the ability to discover, understand, clarify, and communicate spirit truths in such a way to help others develop a personal relationship with God where he wants them to serve and be known. Another gift is teaching, which is the ability to study God’s word to communicate spirit truths in such a way to help others develop a personal relationship with God where he wants them to serve and be known.

We acknowledge the many contributors that helped and encouraged us to write this book. We are thankful to God for the desire to discover, understand, clarify, and communicate spirit truths in such a way to help others develop a personal relationship with God where he wants them to serve and be known.

Mr. Quinones’ inspirational speech in the Week 15 Lecture included this quote from Acts 15:25-29. “Now Barnabas was a good man, full of the Holy Spirit and faith; and much people were added to the Lord. Then Saul had determined in his heart to go to Damascus, and while he was there, he found a teacher of the faith, named Silas, who was a good man, and full of the Holy Spirit and of faith: and many people were added to the Lord.” The number of converts is not stated in the passage, but it suggests that many people were added to the Lord. This is a great example of the power of faith and the importance of teaching others the truths of the Bible.

In Acts 11:22-26, the tale of a young Irishman who was filled with the Holy Spirit and encouraged the believers to stay true to the Lord. He was also teaching and was a good man and teacher. It is stated that Barnabas and Peter, and Paul were the leaders of the church for about 10 years. They may have been beaten or stoned or killed but they still taught the word of God. So if you want a full Sunday school, Vacation Bible School (VBS), or Old and/or New Testament then do it.

Homecoming fanfare

The Ebola "outbreak" in Dallas is a very minor threat when you know but what you know.

This is the ability to direct and guide a church and its ministry. It also states that Barnabas, Peter, and Paul were the leaders of the church for about 10 years. They may have been beaten or stoned or killed but they still taught the word of God. So if you want a full Sunday school, Vacation Bible School (VBS), or Old and/or New Testament then do it.

It is a time period in which we celebrate Columbus Day.

It is important in school and in the work force.

Knowledge isn't just important in the Bible. The ability to study God’s word and to communicate spirit truths in such a way to help others develop a personal relationship with God where he wants them to serve and be known.

The only way you can catch Ebola if you physically come into contact with the fluids of someone who has the disease, a very slight chance in Mississippi: This topic is not only important to get a better understanding of the disease, but also important to know how it affects the world. It is important to understand that there is a much bigger impact than we've realized. It is important to talk to each other if you are going to lose something, feel something that is worth it. The only way you can catch Ebola if you physically come into contact with the fluids of someone who has the disease, a very slight chance in Mississippi.

The first thing you should think about is that this disease from Africa that most people could.

The most important thing that sticks out to me the most is that the ability to discover, understand, clarify, and communicate spirit truths in such a way to help others develop a personal relationship with God where he wants them to serve and be known.

Then there is also wisdom. A person with wisdom is one who has the ability to gain insight into the practical applications of Bible knowledge. The ability to discern, understand, clarify, and communicate spirit truths in such a way to help others develop a personal relationship with God where he wants them to serve and be known.

ABC News reporter and anchor John Quinones brought his personal story of the life-changing power of education to Pearl River Community College on Oct. 9. Quinones grew up in a Mexican neighborhood of San Antonio, spoke no English when he went to first grade and spent part of his teenage years as a migrant farm worker. But through education, he became an Emmy Award winner and host of the Primetime series What Would You Do?

His presentation at PRCC was part of the Honors Lecture Series sponsored by the Lower Pearl River Valley Foundation.

“Take that first step,” Quinones said. “It doesn’t matter if you can’t see the whole staircase – take that first step.”

Although his family has been in Texas for seven generations, Quinones grew up in a Spanish-speaking family and didn’t learn English until he was in school. When he was 13, his father lost his job and the family joined a caravan of migrant workers, picking cherries in Michigan and tomatoes in Ohio.

“I learned so much,” he said. “It was a good thing we had to work.”

After the family returned to San Antonio, Quinones was accepted into the TRIO Upward Bound program which provided him with extra Saturday classes during high school.

“For me it was a helping hand,” he said. “It made it possible for me to go to college.”

Quinones joined a drama class to help with losing his Spanish accent and worked on the school newspaper. Despite his plans to go to college and become a broadcaster, school counselors tried repeatedly to steer him towards trade; he said.

“I had a dream - I wanted to be a reporter,” he said.

His story resonated with PRCC students.

“John Quinones’ Power of Education brought to light a new perspective on education as well as taking advantage of every opportunity that comes my way,” said PRCC student Gloria Murphy of Brandon. “He encouraged me to strive for dreams I thought were impossible.”

Quinones earned a bachelor’s degree at St. Mary’s University in San Antonio while working at a radio station and taking broadcasting classes at San Antonio College, a junior college.

He later earned a master’s degree from the Columbia University School of Journalism in New York City.

Quinones joined ABC News in 1982 as a general assignment reporter in Miami, spending nearly a decade reporting in Central America. Despite repeatedly winning Emmy Awards for his work, he was unsuccessful in joining the 20/20 show for several years. But he kept trying.

“Don’t let a lack of persistence,” he said. “Don’t let a lack of persistence stop you from your dreams.”

He was named co-anchor of the ABC news magazine Primetime and is the host of What Would You Do?

“Now let’s have the discussion,” Quinones said.

Before the presentation at PRCC’s Brownstone Center for the Arts, Quinones met with students in the Pearl River Community College Honors Institute.

Shelby Harriel named PRCC Humanities Teacher of the Year

POPLARVILLE – Shelby Harriel has been named 2014 Poplarville Campus Teacher of the Year by the Phi Theta Kappa (PTK) chapter of the Mississippi Community College Board (MCCB), it was announced during a recent ceremony.

Harriel teaches English and general education classes at PRCC’s Forrest County Center. The award was presented at a recent Phi Theta Kappa meeting on Thursday, Oct. 23, at "Forbidding, Hidden and Unknown: The Constitution, a pocket-sized book," a Phi Theta Kappa luncheon and educational lecture.

Although Harriel teaches classes at the Forrest County Center, she grew up a short distance away in rural Laurel County, Kentucky, and attended Morehead State University.

"Mississippi is a major influence on me," Harriel said. "It’s a part of who I am."

Harriel said that she was surprised to learn that she had won the award, which she described as "a beautiful, handmade medallion." She plans to use the funds from the award to pay for travel to attend the Phi Theta Kappa national convention in 2015.

The late grandfather, as a result of her successful teaching, also taught the arts and was known as "a gentleman and a great musician."

Harriel said that she was "very much a full-service teacher," as she often works with students to help them improve their grades. She said that she is very proud of her students and that she is always ready to help them.

"I love teaching and enjoy working with students," she said.

On October 30, the Forrest County Criminal Justice and Sociology students and sponsors traveled to the Louisiana State Penitentiary for a field trip.

Students visit Angola

On Oct. 14, about 30 criminal justice and sociology students and sponsors traveled to the Louisiana State Penitentiary for a field trip. The trip was organized by Dr. Priscilla Slade, assistant professor of criminal justice and sociology.

"We had never been to Angola and this was a unique opportunity to see Angola and in Louisiana’s main security prison housing largely violent offenders," Slade said.

Slade said that the students were to meet the inmates, tour the facility, and ask questions about life in Angola and in Louisiana’s main security prison housing largely violent offenders.

"The trip was very well-received by the students and we received some very positive feedback from the students," Slade said.

The students included freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors.

"I really enjoyed the trip," said freshman Anthony Brown, "I learned a lot about the prison system and the way it works."

"I was impressed with how the inmates behaved and how they were treated," said freshman Angela Jones.

The students were given a tour of the facility, and had the opportunity to ask questions of inmates and staff.

Eric Clark steps down as MACJC director

Eric Clark on Sept. 19 announced he is retiring as director of the state Community College Board effective June 30 of this year.

Clark, former longtime secretary of state, has served in various capacities with the Community College Board since January 2008. He was secretary of state for 12 years and served 16 years in the state Legislature. He also taught history and government at Taylorsville High School, Mississippi College, Mississippi College and Belhaven University.

In a statement, Clark said: “I began teaching at Taylorsville HS and Jones County JC in the fall of 1973. Next summer will make 40 years in public service, and I think that will be a good time for a change. I have a lifelong love for the state of Mississippi, and I am very grateful for the opportunity to have served our citizens these years.”

Johnny Allain, President of Northeast Mississippi Community College and chair of the Mississippi Association of Community and Junior Colleges, said “On behalf of the 15 community college presidents, I thank Dr. Clark for his leadership to the Mississippi community college system. When he came to the Community and Junior College Board in 1999, the system was beginning to feel the effects of the national recession, and he helped us to guide our institutions through those difficult times. Through his leadership, we were able to balance record enrollments at the same time as when our budgets were being reduced.”

Sen. David Blount, worked for Clark in the Secretary of State’s Office in 1986. “He is one of the finest public servants Mississippi has produced,” Blount said. “He was elected to the MS Legislature in 1979, the same year William Winter was elected governor. Dr. Clark has been a leader ever since, particularly in behalf of education for all Mississippians.”

In the coming weeks, MCCB board members will begin the process of searching for Clark’s replacement.

Enrollment on slight decline

Preliminary enrollment numbers for Mississippi’s higher education systems – both universities and community colleges – revealed a negative factor in systems that have become inextricably linked to the economy.

Student enrollment in the state’s community colleges took a dip this fall, reversing a trend over the last few years that saw the system’s enrollment increase each year.

Mississippi’s, enrollment at the state’s public universities rose slightly.

Hancock Center report: first Fall Fest Oct. 30

By RAMSHIRE BARNES
Assistant VP for Hancock Center

On the first day of October, some students and faculty/staff members of the Hancock Center had an opportunity to participate in the Mississippi Education Policy Navigator; Dr. Scott Alsobrooks, Vice President of Economic and Community Development, was the keynote speaker for the event.

The event was a first for the Hancock Center and was held at Pearl River Community College’s Hancock Center all wore pink in support of Breast Cancer Awareness.

Barnes picked for fellowship program

Raymonde Barnes has been selected to participate in the Mississippi Education Policy Navigator Fellowship Program along with 17 other professionals from across the state.

Barnes is assistant vice president at the Hancock Community College Campus in Warde for educational policy and practice.

The program is the Initiative for Javascript [javascript.org] Institute of Government and Community Development at Mississippi State University.

“our commitment and success in cultivating innovative programs that have a positive impact on the economic health of Minnesota,” said Dine’Effert, program coordinator.

“Some of our most talented and dedicated leaders are represented in this year’s fellows. We are very excited to have them work together to learn new skills, develop added in-service training, and build a supportive network for educational improvement and reform.”

Participants in the fellowship program will attend conferences, seminars and group projects, will engage in discussions, and work together to solve a common challenge.

The program will also include a conference in 2021 and assessment policy and practice at the Hancock Center.

PULLASQV – Recruits from Kohler Engines in Hartsville came to Pearl River Community College Sept. 23 looking for temporary part-time employees.

The program is an initiative of the Mississippi Education Policy Navigator; Dr. Scott Alsobrooks, Vice President of Economic and Community Development.

The temporary part-time positions will be available beginning from November through May on a Monday-Thursday/Friday or Tuesday-Thursday schedule.

Students who take the jobs will get a foot in the door and be more likely to work in full-time jobs.

“we prefer to promote from within, so this would be ideal for them.” said Sue Ellis, Industry Relations supervisor. Each Fall, AEOP members conduct a “Passport to Excellence” workshop across the state. The AEOP will be a fun way to meet people, volunteer, employment, job postings and associated educational opportunities.

“AEOP will be selling $1 raffle tickets in local areas (Pine Belt and Hattiesburg) to help fund our program. People will have the opportunity to win a turkey from Stonewall’s BBQ and Catering.
